A successful author and speaker,

Coach Carter will share hard-hitting advice about accountability, integrity, teamwork and leadership to succeed both on and off the basketball court.

Carter has been coaching for more than 15 years. Throughout his life and tenure as a coach he has inspired and guided numerous lives of young men to reach their highest potential.

In 1999, when he was a basketball coach at Richmond High School in Richmond, California, he locked his undefeated, state play-off team out of the gym and forced them to study and to stop counting on athletic potential as the only ticket out of a tough, inner city life. While controversial to the community at first, Carter was eventually praised for his determined emphasis on prioritizing good values for his team. The story of the 1999 season led to the 2005 film "Coach Carter," starring Samuel L. Jackson as Carter.
