Tin Mill Restaurant is located in one of the oldest and most recognized landmarks in Hermann, Missouri. First built in the 1840s, the structure was utilized as a grain elevator during the 1800s and much of the 1900s, and then became an MFA farm distribution center until about 2003. The three-story mill and attached ice house played a critical role in the agricultural and commercial development of Hermann. Known as the Hermann Mill, the facility produced White Pearl Flour and Lucky Hard Wheat Flour. Its' location was particularly useful and efficient due to the proximity to the riverfront, and later was only a couple yards away from the tracks of the Union Pacific Railroad.
